NEW TARIFF BUDGET FINDS OPPOSITION

London, Sept. 30.—(Associated Press Correspondence.)—The new budget with its tariff innovations to which the free traders acquiesced quite willingly at first, has developed a strong opposition to further tariff changes and even to some already decided on. If any protective tariff survives the war, it will probably be aimed only at certain luxuries and some products which Germany had succeeded in monopolizing before the war.

The new tobacco and tea tax is held up by the liberal organs as an object lesson in the effects of protection. There has always been a duty tax on these articles, simply as a means of raising revenue. Tea and tobacco are both controlled by trusts. In anticipation of budget changes, the tea and tobacco importers, who always keep an immense stock on hand, had been importing stocks to last for years. With the first rumors of the new budget, they began to take their goods out of bond. This was prevented to some extent by the arbitrary action of the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the few days preceding the announcement of the new budget.

Under the new budget, the duty on tea was increased eight cents a pound and tobacco a bit under three cents an ounce. But the day following the reading of the new budget in parliament, the tobacco trust announced a new scale for retailers, advancing the price of pipe tobacco four cents an ounce, while cigarettes were put up about 25 per cent a pack, which weighs but part of an ounce. A three-penny packet now costs four cents. Most firms charge four cents extra on a packet of ten cigarettes, which run twelve in the half ounce. The new budget, the free traders point out, simply gave the trusts a chance to shove up the prices of stocks already held in the limit of the new tariff wall. They will pocket millions of dollars that should have gone to the government. Perhaps it will be years in some cases before the wholesaler begins to pay duty.

Tea is controlled by a few big firms who act in harmony. These firms control a system of tea shops—cheap restaurants corresponding to the coffee houses in America—reaching all over England. One firm has tea counters in every railway station in England and tea shops in every town of importance, with a string in London composed of hundreds. These firms ordinarily sell tea at four cents a cup, but have now raised the price to five cents. As there are a hundred cups of tea to a pound—perhaps the leaf is boiled in soda so as to extract the full strength—the increased profits amount to a dollar a pound on the excuse of an eight cent tariff. Tea and tobacco are of course imported products. But the action of the tariff on article smothered to tax, so one paper asserts, would be the same. A protective tariff on food and wearing apparel would merely give the producers and handlers a chance to raise their profits, it says, without benefitting labor, while the increased cost of living would force up wages so that Great Britain could not meet foreign competition as she did in the days of cheap living.

By an irony, the very tobacco trust which is arousing so much indignation among the people, even to the extent of causing some to swear off smoking, has public support when first established. The American tobacco trust some years ago threatened to invade the kingdom. Thereupon the British public rallied to the defense of the British sellers, who established a defensive organization. This defensive league is now made an offensive league against the British public.

It is pointed out that Mr. McKenna made a grave mistake in not putting a stamp tax on tobacco, instead of raising the duties. This is done in the case of patent medicines, which charge the extra amount only when the stamp is affixed. The dealers in medicine are given a certain time in which to comply to the new law.

"I thought you told me you were going around to that China doctor's to look for a job," I said. But there was a sign outside "Firing Daily." Judge.

COMB SAGE TEA IN HAIR TO DARKEN IT

It's Grandmother's Recipe to keep her Locks Dark.

Glossy, Thick.

The old-time mixture of Sage and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's treatment and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the messy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. As you pass the gray disappears, but what left the hair, besides being healthy and clean, the hair after a few applications, also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides preventing dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.

By Contraries.

There is on the Breton coast a little seaside resort nestled in an admirable setting of rocks and groves and equipped with a grand hotel on the beach which has been transformed in these sadly changed days into a hospital for the wounded soldiers of France, says The New York Evening Post. For all that there are other people on the sands beside the convalescent heroes, and especially any number of pretty women, always ready to lend their help to the doctors in charge. Among these a charming dancer from the Theatre Varieties in Paris was particularly lavish with her attentions to the soldiers. One day when she was presenting a big, dark fellow from the south manifested an invincible repugnance to a bitter dose which, by the doctor's orders, he was to drink.

"If you are a good boy and do what the doctor tell you," said the dancer, "you may kiss me."

Instantly, and with one gulp, the big fellow swallowed the stuff, wiped his great moustache and claimed his reward. It was all done so prettily that even the head surgeon, perked himself to smile.

But the real comedy began when the head nurse, a matron turning 50, appeared the next morning and announced:

"Every one of you who takes his medicine will be allowed to kiss me."

The effect was immediate. Each and every patient made a face and put down on his table beside him the dose which he had been about to swallow.

Now the head nurse is goodness itself and her goodness is well voiced with wit. She was the first to laugh at the result of her invitation. Then she pretended to be angry.

"Very well," she cried, "every mother's son of you that hasn't taken his medicine in five minutes will be condemned to kiss me."

The soldiers laughed in their turn—and every glass was hastily picked up and promptly emptied.

Johnny's Good Resolution.

(San Francisco Star.)
"I will not put pins into my dear teacher's chair." (Tacks will hurt the olduffer just as much, anyway.)

"I will not quarrel and fight with my big brother in 1915." (What have I got a little brother for?)

"I will not play truant from school to go fishing or swimming." (That is, in the winter time.)

"I will be kind to dumb animals, such as tigers, lions and elephants." (Stray cats and dogs, however, had better keep out of this neighborhood.)

"I will not throw stones at the beggars." (Beggars will make them holler louder anyway.)

"I will not..." (Oh, that's enough. They say the good life you'll, and I want to live until I catch that red-headed boy in the next street who stuck his tongue out at me yesterday.)

SOCIETY

The Beautiful Kirmess. Anderson's Grand Society Kirmess is approaching perfection more and more each day and the present participants and other interested ones are beginning to realize what a mammoth and artistic production of this will be.

The Bohemians, one of the most artistic and beautiful numbers of the Kirmess was started Monday night and quite a number of young men and women were present both Monday and last night to take part in this beautiful scene.

The opening of this scene is a Gypsy camp at twilight with a real gypsy wagon, tent, and tripod with the swinging kettle, etc. The Gypsy and his men are singing to their sweethearts the charming Gypsy love song, "Slumber on My Little Gypsy sweetheart," after which there is a beautiful dance followed by a march in which many most beautiful figures are executed.

The Strollers, is another popular scene, in which the young boys and girls in their teens take part and this scene often brings back fond memories to many older sweethearts in the audience. This scene has been rehearsing for several days and the interest and eagerness of the girls and boys to take part in such a delightful number has made it possible to make much progress in the few rehearsals that have been held.

Anderson will truly make much of this carnival occasion and there will surely be a great merry-making.

Turkey Dinner.

The ladies of the Senior Philatelic class of the First Presbyterian church will give a turkey dinner next Tuesday, October 26th. This will be the first turkey dinner of the season, and the ladies are making elaborate preparations for an elegant affair. These dinners are annual affairs of this class and they always serve splendid dinners.

Mrs. J. B. McGee left yesterday for Columbia where she will spend several weeks with relatives after which she will go to Bamberg to visit her daughter, Mrs. Frank Bamberg. She will be away all winter.

"My Official Wife."

By special arrangement Mr. Trowbridge has succeeded in getting the picture, "My Official Wife" for next Saturday at the Anderson theatre. This picture was given here last winter, and was considered by all who saw it as one of the finest ever shown here and it has been by special request that Mr. Trowbridge has secured it again. It is a Russian story and is a vivid representation of the conditions of Russian life. There are several beautiful scenes in the royal palace, and the acting through it all is wonderful.

Marriage Announcement.

Mr. and Mrs. John Pope Abney announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Lura Mathews to Mr. James Cuthbert Self on Saturday, October 16, 1915, Kinsley, Greenwood county, S. C., and on the enclosed card, Oregon Hotel, Greenwood, S. C.

Mrs. Halley of Hartwell is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Walter Keese.

Mrs. E. J. Atkinson of Boston, Mass., is in the city, the guest of Mrs. W. E. Atkinson.

The United States and Belgium.

(The Metropolitan Magazine.)

If no duty had been expressly imposed upon the United States in this matter, the German invasion of Belgium, we ought nevertheless to have acted in accordance with the generous instincts of humanity, writes Theodore Roosevelt. But as a negotiator of fact such a duty was expressly imposed upon us by the Hague conventions. The convention signed at The Hague, October 18, 1907, begins by saying that "His Majesty, the German Emperor, King of Prussia," and the other signatory powers including France, Belgium, Russia and the United States, have resolved to conclude a convention laying down clearly the rights and duties of neutral powers in case of war on land. Article 5 states that a neutral power must not allow belligerents to move troops across its territory." Article 20 states that "the fact of a neutral power resisting even by force at-cannot be regarded as a hostile act." Article 7 states that "a neutral power is not called upon to prevent the export of transport on behalf of one or other of the belligerents of arms, munitions of war or in general of anything which could be of use to an army or a fleet." This convention was ratified by Belgium on August 8, 1910; by France on October 7, 1910; by Germany, the United States and Russia on November 27, 1909. It has been alleged by individuals anxious to excuse us for failure to act in accordance with our duty under this convention that article 20 recites: "The provisions of the present convention do not apply except between contracting powers and each only if all the belligerents are parties to the convention." In the first place this objection would be merely technical, even if in some other area of the war a belligerent who was not a party to the convention was con-
